1 Decide what staff will type

List the data staff will enter: client names, contracts, health or payroll data. The more sensitive, the more the next checks matter.

2 Read the sub-processor list

Check which companies process the data and in which countries. Mistral and Langdock publish theirs; ask Proton and Infomaniak in writing.

Mistral Trust Center and Langdock DPA v2.1, read 13 Oct 2026.

3 Find the training switch

Confirm the default for your plan and switch training off before the first chat. On Mistral Team it is an admin setting (Vibe › Privacy); the API has a separate toggle.

Mistral Help Center, 3 Sep 2026.

4 Sign the processing agreement

Sign or accept the provider's data processing agreement (AVV) before staff use it with personal data.

5 Check the admin features you need

Single sign-on, audit logs and data export differ by plan. Mistral keeps audit logs and SSO for Enterprise.

6 Test on your own tasks

Give two or three people the same week of real work in each candidate, in your clients' language, and compare results.

No independent business-task comparison of these assistants was found on 13 Oct 2026.

Know before you choose

- A European company is not a European supply chain: read where each provider's servers and service partners are.
- Langdock moved its parent company from the US to a German SE in September 2026 (Euronews, 16 Sep 2026).
- Aleph Alpha agreed in April 2026 to be acquired by Cohere and sells to enterprises and the public sector, not seats.
